Hidden Sugar Guide

Start with the Added Sugars line

Added sugar is sugar put in while a food is made. The Added Sugars line on a Nutrition Facts label is the clearest place to look. Sugars that are already in fruit or plain milk are a different line.

lifeZoi does not set a personal gram limit. The longer label lesson, including everyday patterns, is in Nutrition. This guide is the short reading practice.

Names that often mean sugar was added

The ingredient list can use more than one word for sugar. This is a reading list, not a complete chemistry table. If you are unsure, use the Added Sugars line.

- Sugar, cane sugar, and brown sugar
- Honey, maple syrup, agave, and molasses
- Corn syrup and other syrups
- Fruit juice concentrate used as a sweetener
- Dextrose and maltose

Compare two foods you already buy

Pick two drinks, yogurts, or sauces from your own kitchen. Read the serving size first, then Added Sugars. A larger serving can make a number look bigger even when the recipes are similar.

You do not have to throw food away. The point is to see the line once, then decide what you want next time.

What this guide does not do

It does not diagnose a condition. It does not forbid a food. It does not promise a change in weight, energy, or heart health.

Educational only. lifeZoi does not diagnose, treat, or promise a result.
It does not promise a longer life.
Read it in lifeZoi: /library/guides/hidden-sugar